This Week's News

Welcome back to school! We hope you had an enjoyable and restful Christmas break and that everyone is ready for some hard work and lots of fun! It's a jam-packed term, as always, so please take a look at the dates for your diary. Happy New Year to all our families!

Word of the Week

eavesdrop

Meaning

When you listen secretly to what people are saying.

Challenge

Try eavesdropping on a conversation. What can you find out?

Here are some examples of the word eavesdrop being used in sentences:
Six-year-old Karen put her ear to the door to eavesdrop on her parents who were discussing whether Karen could attend the party.
FBI agents bugged the alleged criminal's office so they could eavesdrop on his conversations.
 For an additional challenge, discuss this question:
What is the difference between eavesdropping and spying?

Book of the Week from Mrs Collier

Tyger by SF Said

This is a powerful story set in a London that is recognisable but different, where not everybody has the same rights and where endangered species are hunted by evil profiteers. It is beautifully written with lovely illustrations. It's a book full of magic, but also a thought-provoking story that shows the importance of treating all people equally. I would recommend it to readers in Y5 and Y6 and it will be in the library for anyone who wants to borrow it.

Pupils standing proud: one finishing a gigantic jigsaw in Jigsaw Club and another nominated dancer of the year at her Dance Club.

All different all achieving here at Old Moat. Well done to both of you!

Welcome back everyone!
